

The Chatham-Kent Black Historical Society & Black Mecca Museum is looking for community members, supporters and allies to join our Board of Directors.

Since 1994 the Chatham-Kent Black Historical Society & Black Mecca Museum has gathered, preserved and celebrated Chatham-Kent's rich Black history. With its collection of displays, artifacts and archives the Black Mecca Museum, with humble roots, has remained dedicated to unveiling the remarkable stories of Chatham-Kent's Black community from its beginnings in 1780's, to present day.

If you have been thinking about a place to volunteer some of your spare time with a local non-profit organization, The Chatham-Kent Black Historical Society & Black Mecca Museum might be the right fit for you.

Our Board of Directors ensures that the historical society and museum continues to meet both our vision and mission, as well as serve our community and visitors alike.

Vision

Infusing Our Community with the Spirit of Our Ancestors

Mission

The Chatham-Kent Black Historical Society is dedicated to the preservation and promotion of the history of Chatham-Kent's Black community and their influence across North America. Our organization aims to educate the residents of Chatham-Kent and visitors about the legacy left by the early Black pioneers and refugees who helped to build the city. The Chatham-Kent Black Historical Society will continue to promote the Chatham-Kent areas most important and prominent Black histories.

Please note, in order to be considered for nomination to our board of directors you must be a member of the Chatham-Kent Black Historical Society & Black Mecca Museum and be in good-standing for at least 90 days.
